

objects

eer

concrete study student project archetype project: the brief called for a "scolarian landscape": every student designs a concrete archetype, based on a study of the work of massimo scolari. the proposed archetype of a water-tower is a three dimensional interface of two piramids. extended steel reinforcement bars, moving with the wind, provide a poetic touch.

product archetype
function concrete study
student project
year 1985

eer architectural design
info@eerdesign.com