

project: the brief for the renovation of the art gallery of the "alliance française de singapour", designed by dominique perrault, requested for a flexible layout, more wall surface for exhibition and less natural daylight. removable exhibition panels are clipped in the ceiling system, allowing them to be moved around freely within the ceiling grid. additional wall surface is created by covering the existing windows from the inside. leaving a minimalistic gap of 2 cm through which a fine line of natural light enters the space. the colour of the tropical daylight changes throughout the day, resulting in a stunning climax every evening at dusk, when a flood of intensely bright cobalt light fills the gallery.
